THE COAST OF MALAY. - C. C. Coffin, "Carleton" of the Boston Journal, gives the following description of the coast of Malay:

Nature has put a great block in the path of commerce here, as she has also at Suez and Panama. The Malay peninsula is a narrow tongue of land-only twelve miles wide at one place; but it it did not exist, or if there were a canal across it, vessels bound to or from China might save one thousand miles of their voyage. Off the coast lie numerous islands. This is the Enchanted land. You are never weary of gazing upon the hills and mountains which rise one after another-some so high that their summits are lost in the cloudsclothed in richest green from the wave-washed rock to the highest peak.

You look into ravines, behold distant vistas, varying every moment, revealing new beauties. which before you have time to admire them are succeeded by others equally enchanting. These are "spice islands" of poesy, of nutmeg, clove, pimento, and cinnamon, fanned by balmy breezes, laved by gentle waves, reposing beneath skies ever beautiful-such islands as have enchanted us when sailing over the sea of reading in former years with Moore and Byron, and even with Shakspeare, and sober John Milton.

But there is another side to the picture. The mercury to-day is 93 in the shade, the atmosphere steamy and sticky. Wipe yourself thoroughly dry with a towel, and in five minutes you need to repeat the process. Energy evaporates. You tell like doing nothing, but would give anything for a cool place to do it in. The breeze, so balmy over the poetic page, is hot and penetrating, and you would give a big price if you could take off your flesh and sit in your bones.

If we were to go on shore we should find snakes, scorpions, centipedes, lizards, and all sorts of vermin in yonder spice groves. There are wood leeches which creep into your nostrils when asleep, and make themselves a comfortable home in your nose, living on the best blood of your brain; the deadly cobra comes into the house without invitation, and makes himself at home in your bed; spiders, with legs three inches long and bodies the size of a small teacup, spin webs over your windows or hang on the corners of your rooms. Swarms of flying ants come into the dining room at dinner time and light upon your roast mutton; white ants bore out the table legs, the pillars of the house, carry off your best suits of clothes or your books in a single night; bugs, flies, fleas, beetles, cockroaches, lice—blue bugs, black bugs, yellow bugs, green bugs, little bugs and big bugscreeping, flying, skipping, hopping, jumping, running-coming at morning, noon, and night -especially at night, when you are sweating, tossing, turning, and tumbling, and trying to get a wink of sleep. How nice to have a great spider straddle over your face, or to have cockroaches as large as mice run across the dinner table. If these seem to be exaggerations, go into the Museum of Natural History and see in the wonderful collection of insects there what sort of company the people of the tropics are compelled to put up with. The lands of spice are delightful as seen by the poet's eye. The natives undoubtedly think there are no climes so beautiful, and there are some Englishmen who profess to like these lands better than their own misty isle. It is well for the world that tastes differ.

A GREAT AEROLITE. - We have an account of the fall of a great aerolite in Cheatham county, Tennessee, about nineteen miles from Nashville, on the 12th ult.

The account is a very graphic one—the black clouds suddenly lighted up with a whitish-red glare—the metallic planet bolting through them wrapped in flames from its rapid oxydation-the white hot mass gleaming brighter and brighter till it struck the earththe terrific crash as it burst through three feet of solid rock-the hills trembling with the awful shock-the trees falling all round, being shaken out of the earth by the concussion-all this must have presented a scene such as man has seldom witnessed on this earth.

The huge mass burst through the thick rock, like a stone through a window-pane, and buried itself many feet in the earth, where at the last accounts it was lying in its hole dis charging steam like a huge engine, and though days had elapsed still too hot to be touched by the hand. It is of a conical shape, the natural result of the punching through of a solid rock by an enormous lump of white hot metal. It is supposed to weigh five tons.

HEAR HIM.—"Atter an experience of some ten years in giving out washing, I say a majority, if not more, of the washerwomen know too much. Many young men would no doubt be surprised to learn that during the week the washerwoman has their clothes in hand she hires them out for special occasions to the colored aristocracy, and sometimes to poor house, No. 56, south St. Asaph st. white trash.' After being worn until Friday, Jy 21-6m they are washed again and returned to the OPARTNERSHIP NOTICE:

"It often happens that they are not brought back in time by those to whom they are hired, in which case the washerwoman is never at a loss for an excuse. This sharp practice is not played altogether upon innocent men, but our fastidious young ladies are subject to the same trick, and the fine linen worn by Miss Flora McFlimsey, on Sunday evening, is soaked with perspiration from Dinah at the ball on Wednesday or Thursday night. Truly may it be said in this case that 'ignorance is bliss.' This is not pleasant to think of, but there is more in it than those who have their washing done at home may imagine."—Norfoll: Virg.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of the cured of his presents the pride of his presents the pride of his presents. his country, the pride of his parents, should be snatched from all prespects and enjoyments of ife by the consequence of deviating from the path of nature, and indulging in a certain secret habit. Such persons must, before contem-MARRIAGE, reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubial hap-piness. Indeed, without these the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage; the prost of bourly darkens to the view, the mand becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the meanchely reflection that the happiness of another Opcomes blighted with your own. DISEASES OF IMPRUDENCE. When the misguided and impredent votary of pleasure fluis that he has imbibed the seeds of this paintul disease it too often happe, a that an ill-timed sense of shame or cread of discovery deters him from applying to hose who from education and respectability can detepefriend him, delaying till the constitutions symptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as alcerated sore throat, diseases, nose, nocturnal pains in the head and disease. dimness of sight, deatness, nodes on the shin-bones and arms, blotches on the head, once and extremities, progressing with trightful rapidity till at last the palate of the mouth or the nes of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awild disease becomes a horrid object of commiss ration, till death puts a period to his dreadful sufferings, by sending him to "that Undiscovered Country from whence no traveller returns."

It is a MELANCHOLY FACT that thou sands fall victims to this terrible disease, owing to the unskilfulness of ignorant pretenders, w 10, by the use of that DEADLY POISON, MFR.
